IGNITE

"Be a student of your students."

Look to pop-culture (but it doesn't necessarily have to be a book.)

Strive for initiatives that would have broad cross-gender appeal.

Stay on top of trends.

What's catching your students on fire?

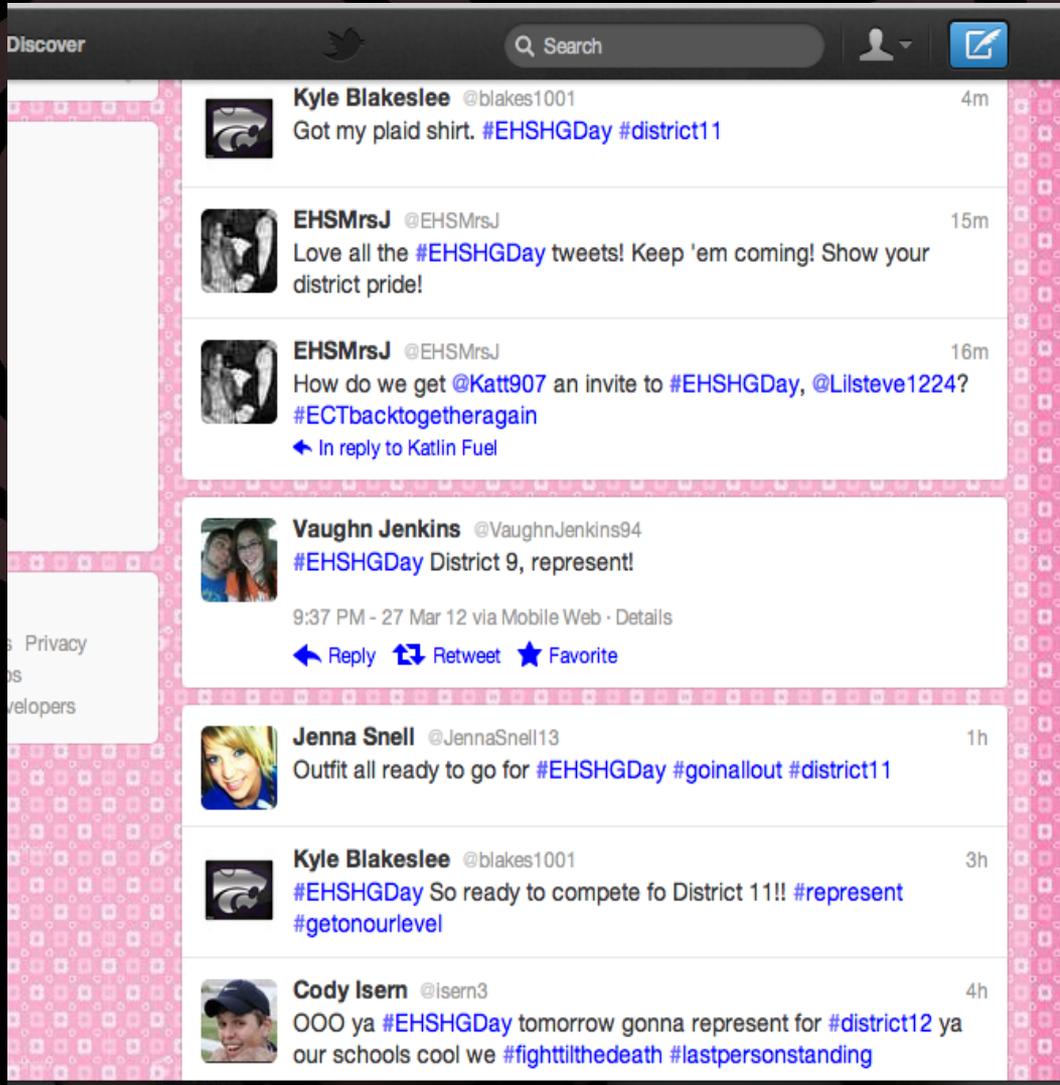

YOUR SCHOOL

What does your school look like to people on the outside?

Relationships
Student-Staff Interaction
School Spirit/Participation
Demographics
Special factors

What needs improving in your school?

THROUGH

Innovation happens through various channels.

Social media
Technology/video
Leaders

How do your students communicate?

COLLABORATIVE

Use the event as a platform for cross-curricular instruction.

Create opportunities for meaningful/intentional adult-student interaction and modeling.

Purposeful mentor/advisee relationships

When was the last event at your school that included everybody?

INNOVATION

What keeps people from following through on their most creative ideas?

Innovation takes time, resources, and a progressive spirit.

What resources exist in your community?

Tangible Benefits from Collaborative Innovation

School spirit

Improved school culture

Mentor/advisee framework

"We can do big things!"

Dystopian Writing Prompt

From writingprompts.tumblr.com - October 5, 11:23 AM

Writing prompt!

Dystopias are societies in miserable, fearful times. Examples: George Orwell's 1984 and Suzanne Collins's Hunger Games. Dystopias usually feature "bleak or not-apocalyptic" landscapes, caste systems, futuristic technology, mass control, resource scarcity, war, violence and the existence of non-human entities. Make up your own dystopian setting and give plenty of detail to explain what's so horrible about it.

The Eleventh Plague by Jeff Hirsch

From www.youtube.com - July 12, 4:23 PM

"An excellent, taut debut novel." — Suzanne Collins, author of The Hunger Games. In an America devastated by war and plague, the only way to survive is to keep moving.
